Book and Film Series Continues with The Grapes of Wrath

Belleville – The Belleville Public Library will offer the second in a four-part book and film discussion series about the 1930s entitled Bright Dreams, Hard Times. A screening and discussion of The Grapes of Wrath will be shown on Sunday, March 7, at 1:30 PM at the library, 1327 19th St. Members of the community are invited to attend the free program. For more information about the series, contact the library at 527-5305.

The series is sponsored by the Kansas Humanities Council, a nonprofit cultural organization, in conjunction with the Bright Dreams, Hard Times: America in the Thirties Chautauqua coming to Belleville June 9-13. The Chautauqua will feature tent programs by scholars portraying famous historical figures from the 1930s: President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Louisiana Senator Huey Long, Pentecostal leader Aimee Semple McPherson, writer Zora Neale Hurston, and humorist Will Rogers. The Council's Resource Center is furnishing the books, films, and discussion leaders for the Belleville series.

The Grapes of Wrath, starring Henry Fonda, is based on John Steinbeck's 1939 novel about the Joad family's trek from dustbowl-ravaged Oklahoma to California. Kim Stanley, chair of Modern Languages at McPherson College, will lead a discussion following the film screening.

The books and films in the series reflect the themes of the Bright Dreams, Hard Times: America in the Thirties Chautauqua. The Chautauqua explores 1930s themes that are familiar today: environmental devastation, economic concerns, the relationship between Americans and their government, the flowering of intellectual and artistic activity, and the role of new media in American lives.

Upcoming Bright Dreams, Hard Times events include a discussion of Zora Neale Hurston's book Mules and Men and a screening of the documentary Stories from the Dust Bowl. To check out books or for more information about the series, contact the Belleville Public Library at 527-5305.
